LEARNING OBJECTIVES

At the end of the lesson, you should be able to

- Apply SQ3R components effectively to comprehend and analyse complex academic texts.
- Develop the ability to formulate advanced, thought-provoking questions when engaging with challenging academic material.
- Enhance critical thinking skills by actively seeking answers and connections within the text.
- Recognise the broader applicability of the SQ3R method in various academic disciplines.

Have you ever read a text, and in a few minutes you forget what you just read?

WHAT ARE READING STRATEGIES

Reading strategies are techniques and approaches that individuals use to enhance their reading comprehension, retention, and overall effectiveness when engaging with written text. These strategies help readers process information, extract meaning, and gain a deeper understanding of the material.

SQ3R happens to be one of these strategies.

SURVEY

This involves quickly scanning the entire text before you start reading in detail. During this phase, you should look at headings, subheadings, images, and any other features that provide an overview of the material. This initial survey gives you a sense of the text's structure and main ideas.

When surveying a history textbook, look for chapter titles, subtitles, and the captions of illustrations to understand the historical periods and key events covered in the chapter.

CHAPTER 4: THE RENAISSANCE PERIOD IN EUROPE

The Renaissance, which spanned roughly from the 14th to the 17th century, was a cultural and intellectual movement that profoundly impacted Europe. This period saw a revival of interest in classical art, literature, and learning. It marked a shift from medieval traditions to a focus on humanism and individualism. Notable figures like Leonardo da Vinci, Michelangelo, and William Shakespeare made significant contributions during this era. This chapter explores the key characteristics of the Renaissance, its impact on society, and the works of some of its most celebrated artists and thinkers.

QUESTION

This is where you start asking questions, not answering the questions from the passage. Here, you generate questions based on what you've discovered during the survey. These questions should guide your reading and help you focus on the most critical information.

Example: After surveying a scientific research paper, you might generate questions like, "What is the primary hypothesis being tested?" or "What methods are used to collect data?"

QUESTION - EXAMPLE

Chapter 4: The Renaissance Period in Europe

- What were the primary characteristics of the Renaissance period?
- How did the Renaissance impact European society and culture?
- What is the significance of the shift from medieval traditions to humanism and individualism?
- Can you provide examples of the contributions made by Leonardo da Vinci, Michelangelo, and William Shakespeare during the Renaissance?

MID LESSON QUESTION

Why is it important to focus on our own questions while using the strategy SQ3R?

READ

Now, this is the time to read the actual text!

Two main goals must be achieved during this phase.

1. Read to answer the questions you have generated.
2. Read to engage with the material to gain a fuller understanding.

RECITE

Vocalise your thoughts!

This is where you recite or verbally explain the key points, words, and concepts from the text.

In the text example, you can identify the previous points highlighted and more, as they form the bases of the main idea of the excerpt.

REVIEW

In the "Review" phase, you create summaries, outlines, or notes to reinforce your understanding.

REVIEW

Note that you may want to create more organised notes or summaries of the key information to facilitate your review.

The "Review" step ensures that you maintain a deep understanding of the material over time and can recall and apply it when needed, such as in exams or discussions related to the Renaissance period.

SUMMARY

SUMMARY

SQ3R is a systematic and effective reading strategy designed to enhance comprehension and retention of complex texts. The acronym stands for Survey, Question, Read, Recite, and Review. In this approach:

Survey: Readers quickly scan the text, noting headings, subheadings, and other structural elements to get an overview.

Question: They generate thought-provoking questions about the material to guide their reading.

Read: They actively read the text, seeking answers to their questions and identifying key information.

Recite: Readers verbally or mentally summarise what they've learned to reinforce understanding.

Review: Finally, they revisit their notes and the text itself to ensure long-term retention.
